Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, commander of the German forces an the Somme front, and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, both declare that the efforts of the French and British to force a breach in the German lines on the Somme have been fruitless. The entente troops will have to go through a winter campaign on the Somme and continue their efforts next year, Crown Prince Rupprecht is quoted as saying. The imperial chancellor, in his address to the Reichstag, declared that the German front there "stands firm and unshaken" and added that "the end is not yet in sight." It must be borne in mind, however, that the Germans are not in the habit of letting their real plans get by the censors. There are growing indications that the German eastern lines will have to be shortened soon.

GOOD COLD DINNER

SPLENDID MEAL TO SERVE WHEN THERMOMETER IS HIGH.

Except the Vegetables, All the Dishes May Be Prepared in the Early Morning and Work in Torrid Kitchen Avoided.

There is no reason why the cook kitchen these days, but she must use her brains and be willing to get up early in the morning if the family is to be adequately nourished without the usual hologoust. usual holocaust.

A well-balanced summer dinner may begin with simple iced bouillon made by shimmering two pounds of the round of beef in two quarts of water to which is added seasoning of onion, red pepper, bay leaves, salt and spices tied in a muslin bag. This simmering must continue for two or three hours, but should be done before the heat of the day. When the liquor is cool it should be strained and set against the ice and only removed to put on the table in bouillon cups of shaved ice. If a firmer jelly is preferred a half package of gelatine may be mixed with the liquor after it is strained and the whole allowed to boil up once. Great care should be taken that all fat is removed before the jelly is served.

Following the iced bouillon pressed chicken may be chosen. A plump temperate habits, who can speak, three-pound chicken will make sufficient for a family of four. This should be well washed in salt water and cut in pieces as if for frying. Boil in just enough water to keep from burning and season with celery, onion and pepper. When it is tender take from the fire and remove all the bones, then cut with a very sharp knife into minute cubes and add pickled walnuts and mushrooms chopped very fine. A little Worcestershire sauce is a great addition to this dish and gives just the needed piquancy for most palates. Mix all together thoroughly and put into an earthen bowl. Cover with a flat dish, set a weight upon it and put the whole in a vessel containing salt and ice. Care must be taken to pour off the brine, however. After an hour the chicken may be set in the icebox, where it will keep until served.

Instead of the eternal potatoes, rice is excellent served with chicken. To cook rice oriental style select a cupful of the very best unpolished quality. Wash in six waters and drain the last through a colander. Put the drained rice into an enamel saucepan with two cupfuls of cold water and a half teaspoonful of salt. Boil it briskly until set on the back of the stove for at least three-quarters of an hour. It may then be taken off and kept in a cool, dry place well covered until dinner. When serving time arrives throw the rice into a napkin-lined colander and set over the tea kettle until it is heated, when it may be lightly thrown nto an uncovered vegetable dish.

Salad of any summer vegetables prepared in the early morning should be the third course and the last is always best when some sort of ice or ice cream is chosen. This may be heaped in melons, or upon baked apples or, over simple vanilla ice cream, may be poured fruit sirups left from preserving or NEW SERIES OF STOCK pineapple sirup, than which there is nothing more refreshing.

vary the drinks an extra two ci fuls of strong coffee may be made in the breakfast percolator. This should be poured off the moment it is brewed into a sterile mason jar sealed just as if it were being put up and set in a basin of cold water. When it is cool it must be kept near the ice until serving time. This coffee essence added to equal quantity scalded milk served in tall glasses of shaved ice and topped with whipped cream is a real delicacy.

Lemon in Salad Dressing.

Two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of red pepper, a little celery salt, one cupful of milk, one cupful of water. Beat eggs, add sugar, salt, pepper, celery salt and milk. Mix flour and water to a smooth paste and add to above mixture, cook in double boiler, stirring frequently to avoid lumps. When cooked add butter and beat it in with an egg beater; then add the juice of one lemon. When ready to use, add a cupful of whipped cream, and beat till thoroughly mixed with salad dressing. This is much more delicate than if made with vine gar, also more wholesome.

Flaked Pineapple.

In tropical countries pineapple is generally served in the half shell, an easy way of handling the fruit. Cut off the top, split the pine in half lengthwise and cut out the hard center core. Then with a silver fork shred out the fiber, leaving the troublesome little eyes in the half skin; the fiber can then be sweetened, mixed with grated coconut, or flavored with grape juice to taste and returned to the half shells for serving.

Improves the Gravy. Did you ever try using a "thimble ful" of milk with the water in making gravy? Or the smallest shake of cel ery salt and a pinch of sugar in addi tion to the salt and pepper? These will transform the most plebian gravy, says a Mother's Magazine reader.

For a Mustard Paste.

If you mix mustard paste with the white of an egg instead of hot water the result will be as good and it will not blister. Warm campherated oil is A Splendid Tonic.

OLLARS FOR CANINE HEROES

hree Famous War Dogs That Have Geen Monored by France Are Worthily Among List.

The incrusted skeleton of a dog of Pompeii wears a collar bearing a legend that shows he saved the life of his young master several timesfrom pirates, from thieves, from frowning. When discovered the body of the dog was outstretched upon that of the lad, to show that he was trying to save him from the suffocating shower of lapilli and the flow of lava. The dogs of St. Bernard would have recognized in him a colleague after their own heart, remarks the Philadelphia Ledger.

But there are three famous war dogs that live to wag the tail and have just received high honors at the hands of the French government, At a public meeting, with an official of the try of agriculture presid-ing, go'l collars have been clasped round the necks of Fend l'Air and Loustic. Fond l'Air helped his master free himself when a trench caved in. Loustic was a useful spy, but the poor beast could not hear the kind things said to him, for the noise of the artillery fire has made him deaf. The third dog, Pyrame, was too busy at the front to be present. He saved a battalion by barking when the Germans came, and then carrying a message that brought relief. The finale of the ceremony was a procession across the platform of 15 war dogs, with the soldiers that trained them. A book might easily be written on the part that animals have played in the war. It will be a story of heroic fidelity and of suffering that must tend to make us more thoughtful of creatures that sometimes acquit themselves more nobly han we who insist that they have n

TREATMENT OF TREE WOUNDS

Use of White Lead, Zinc, Yellow Ochro and Other Materials Said to Be Detrimental.

Recent experiments conducted by the New York station tend to contradict the generally accepted opinion of fruit growers regarding the advisability of treating wounds caused by the removal of branches from trees.

From the results of this work it is concluded that the use of white lead, white zinc, yellow ochre, coal tar, and shellae for wounds under five inches in diameter is not only useless but usually detrimental to the tree. This is particularly true of peaches and perhaps of other stone fruits.

The substances mentioned retarded the healing of the wounds; white lead proved the best, but it is not thought worth while to use even white lead on wounds two or three inches or less in diameter, though it may be advisable to use it on wounds where very large branches have been removed.

On the larger wounds, where much surface is exposed, the white lead helps to keep out moisture and organisms which cause decay. The smaller wounds heal so quickly that the evil effects of covering may more than set the benefits derived from its use.

What a gain for repose and beauty, to say nothing of space, and time for important duties, if these objects could be eliminated. Simplicity is the keynote of the age, and the comfortable home is a restful place.

Emerson says a lady is serene. Doctors tell us that hurry, like worry, is death to good looks and an enemy to health as well. The people who accomplish the most in the world's work are those who plan well and serenely accomplish their task.

Of course, there are always the unexpected interruptions which we cannot plan on, but it is wise to know the length of time it takes to accomplish certain definite pieces of work.

Systematic and Unremitting Efforts Necessary to Combat the Deadly Work Done by Summer Pest -Method Worth Trying.

A home-made flytrap which has been most effective in barns, near outhouses and other places on the farm where flies are numerous, may be made as follows:

The bottom frame of the trap is made by fitting two flat barrel hoops one inside the other so that the inside diameter is 18 inches. The upper part of the frame is made in the same way, but a round board is fitted tightly into the hoops to form the top. In the top board a hole 10 inches square is cut. Parallel to the sides of this opening and about an inch from them should be nailed half-inch strips. Into these little jambs should be fitted a screened frame, which should be held tightly in mesh screen wire 24 inches wide around the top and the bottom, and wire or solder the lap so that no flies can escape. Outside the screen nail to the top and the bottom frames at equal intervals four 25-inch laths or strips of wood, allowing them to project one inch at the bottom to form legs for the trap and leave an entrance for flies into the cone.

The cone for a trup of this size should be 22 inches high and of such diameter at the bottom that it fits exactly inside the lower hoop, to which it should be tightly tacked. In making the cone it is easiest to experiment with a large sheet of stiff paper until a cone of the right size has been made. This paper when cut will be a pattern for cutting the wire screening. An easy way to make this pattern is to use a semicircle of paper with a radius of 24 inches. It will take about twothirds of such a semicircle to make the pattern for a cone of the size described.

Before inserting the cone, make a small hole at the point or apex, through which the flies can crawl into the trap.

To bait the trap, place beneath the cone on a flat saucer or a piece of board banana skins, sirup, meat or other foods which seem to attract flies. The flies will fly upward from the bait into the cone and continue until they large as when new and fitted me even go through the small hole into the cage. To remove the flies from the cage, scald them and pour them out of the opening at the top.

> Pork Tenderloins in Chafing Dish. Remove the small rounds of meat from the under part of the pork ribs and place in the chafing dish, together with a cupful of the brown gravy, a few drops of tabasco sauce, one-half cupful of tomato catsup, a pinch each of salt and celery salt and a small piece of butter; simmer only until the meat is thoroughly heated, then place over the hot water pan, stirring in a cupful of cooked mushrooms that have been cut in small pleces; serve very hot on squares of fried hominy, gar nished with crisp parsley.

Plain Scrubbing.

A woman whose floors are of the plain board order that call for much scrubbing says:

"It has been my experience that in washing plain board floors it is best to scrub them with cool, soapy water without suds. I scrub with the grain of the wood, and not around in circles, as is usually done, to take off the dirt. If you do this and change the water often, using plenty of soap, you will be surprised how white the floor will

It Brings Relief To Boy Standing His Watch Deep In Mud.

Once upon a time, only a few months after this terrible world war had begun, Private Bailey, a soldier in the ranks had stood for days in the trenches "somewhere in France." The cold rains soaked him to the skin; the mud was deep. He had had no rest. Weary and aching with rheumatic pains, he recalled the faith his mother had in Sloan's Liniment. He asked for it in his next letter home. A large bottle was immediately sent him and a few applications killed the pain, once more he was able to stand the severe exposure. He shared this wonderful muscle-soother with his comrades, and they all agreed it was the greatest "reinforcement" that had ever come to their rescue. Eggsaggerated.

Mitchell Lingo, of Trinity, near Federalsburg, Md., claims to have the champion egg-layer of the world in a two-year-old hen. The hen has laid in the same spot in the barn alley, and Lingo backed by officials of the town states that she has laid 365 eggs last year. The hen is a Rhode Island Red. Mr. Lingo cannot make poultrymen, who know that 200-egg hens are very rare, believe any such story. He may have gathered 365 eggs out of the same nest, but his champion hen had a good deal of assistance.

Prayers in British Parliament. The chaplain who opens the daily sessions of the British house of commons appears always in white silk robes and white kid gloves. He enters the chamber with the speaker and each bows twice to the house as they proceed to the table. Then, as they stand together, the speaker on the right, the chaplain reads the special prayers appointed for the occasion, the members also standing. When he has finished the chaplain retires, walking backward and bowing as he leaves the chamber. As he passes out an attendant calls, "Prayers are over,' and the house proceeds to the transaction of

FOOD AND PHYSICAL EXERCISE

One Should Be Made to Balance the Other, in the Opinion of Medical Men.

It has not been so very long, comparatively speaking, since our ancestors were almost exclusively animal in their daily pursuits, says the New York Medical Journal. Since then the blessing of cooking has proved often a curse, in that it adds temptation to our natural tendency to take more food than we need for sedentary purposes, merely for the sake of the savor thereof. It is such a joy to dine, and other sources of pleasure seem so scarce, or of such less moment to the average man, that to a large extent eating has become one of the reasons for existence. We have made much of the evil of treating to alcoholic drinks, but the temptation held out to intemperance in foods is a more widespread evil, with serious consequences in the long

With a reasonable amount of muscular exercise, perhaps, truer physiological balance is reached than if we are purely sedentary. We approximate more nearly our animal ancestry as to muscular activity, and we can exercise our digestive powers a trifle more, without harm. Surely if we do not expect to suffer in one way or another, the amount of bodily exercise must balance the intake of food, or the intake of food must be made to correspond with the degree of bodily activity.
